

[Morgan, Charles]

DEATHS.

In Scipio, on the 26th ult., CHARLES MORGAN, aged 20 years, only son of Wm. and Mary Morgan. The death of this young man was one of the most severe afflictions that could befall his parents. He was their only child, and is every way worthy the love and care they bestowed upon him. Amiable, affectionate and intelligent, to a peculiar degree, he attached all hearts to him within the circle of his acquaintance, and gave abundant promise of fulfilling the high hopes which his parents and friends cherished in regard to him. At the time of his death, the deceased was a member of the Junior Class in Geneva College, where he had won the general respect of his teachers and fellow-students, and established a valuable reputation for studious application, integrity, and all the noble graces of human nature. His funeral was attended by a large concourse of people—the youth in a long procession, appearing as mourners, each with crape and evergreen, the emblems of mourning and hope—and all testifying with flowing tears, their deep sense of the worth of the departed.

In the absence of Br. [Henry L.] Hayward, the consolations of the Gospel were administered by the writer hereof.
